Now we are ready to start.

Mary: You know, David, sometimes I feel like my family just doesn't get me at all.

David: I totally get that, Mary. My parents can be so strict when I just want to hang out with my friends. What about your family?

Mary: It's like they think I'm still a little kid. Just last week my mom found out that I was going to a concert and got angry. She said I'm not mature enough for that kind of stuff.

David: That's rough. What do you think they're scared of?

Mary: I guess they just want to protect me. Why can't they trust me to make my own decisions?

David: I feel the same way. My dad constantly checks my grades, and if I slip up even a little, it's like World War III. I wish he'd just chill out and see that I'm trying my best.

Mary: Right! It's like they forget we're not kids anymore. We're almost adults!

David: Exactly. But think about how they grew up. They probably faced their own challenges.

Mary: Well, maybe that's why they're so protective. It's just hard to remember that when you're in the moment.

David: Yeah, it can feel really lonely sometimes. Do they even remember what it's like to be our age?

Mary: By the way, I was talking to my mom yesterday, she burst into a whole tirade about how social media is ruining modern children.

David: Really? What did she say?

Mary: She just thinks, it's unhealthy. She says, people are more disconnected than ever even though they're always "connected." She doesn't get why I spend so much time on social nets.

David: That's interesting. My parents are kind of the opposite. They think social media is a great way to connect with family. My mum loves posting photos of her garden and keeps up with all her friends from high school.

Mary: That sounds nice! My mum just worries about privacy. She's always telling me to be careful about what I post like I'm going to accidentally share our entire family history or something.

David: Try to show her how you use it to stay in touch with your friends. I think she just sees the negatives because of all the news about cyberbullying and stuff.

Mary: That's a great idea! It might help my mum and dad see that it's not just about talking. We can share updates and photos and it could even bring us closer.

David: Right! Plus, it might give our parents a better understanding of what we do online. Who knows? They might even end up liking it!

Mary: Let's plan it! If nothing else, it could be a fun family project.

David: Totally! Who knows? We might start a social media revolution in our families!
